

MINORITY PROTECTION

Call for Papers - Minority Protection Journal

General Description of the Journal

Minority Protection is the academic Journal of the Károli Gáspár University of the Reformed Church in Hungary. It is devoted to publishing articles dealing with contemporary issues of the traditional national minorities of Europe. While the Journal focuses on legal studies, it intends to maintain an interdisciplinary orientation, encouraging authors to submit papers in political science, sociology, history, and cultural studies. It aims to stimulate the scientific dialogue and the exchange between scholars engaged in issues regarding the autochthonous national communities of Europe.

The Journal has a double-blind peer review system and publishes at least two Issues annually in both Hungarian and English in print and online. The Journal is published open access and is available online on the homepage of the University (<http://www.kre.hu/portal/index.php/kiadvanyok/folyoiratok/kisebbsegvedelem.html>) for all students, scientists, experts, practitioners and researchers interested in this field.

The editorial board comprises university professors and policy practitioners affiliated with seven universities or institutions from five countries (Hungary, Romania, Serbia, Slovakia, and Ukraine).

The editors highly encourage younger scholars to contact the editorial team and seek guidance in preparing a manuscript before submitting their contributions or to discuss a publication idea to see how well it would fit within the Journal.

Studies can be submitted at any time throughout the year. If you submit a work that does not fit within the current Issue, the editors will keep your article on file to consider its publication at a later stage. Please note that the editors may randomly choose to submit studies for anti-plagiarism checks or an AI content detector to scrutinize their originality.

Author(s) will be entitled to two copies of the printed Journal free of charge.

Papers for consideration should be sent via e-mail to: kisebbsegvedelem@kre.hu.
